The image shows a screenshot of a Facebook page for the "FB vs. Breastfeeding Alliance". The page header includes the Facebook logo, the name "FB vs. Breastfeeding", a search bar, and the user profile "Bishakha" with "Home" and "20+" options. The main cover image features five white silhouettes of people holding hands against a black background. From left to right: the first silhouette is making a peace sign; the second is breastfeeding; the third is breastfeeding; the fourth is breastfeeding while holding a smartphone; the fifth is holding two keys. A blue box on the left of the cover image contains the text "Hey Facebook! STOP BULLYING BREASTFEEDERS!" and a silhouette of a breastfeeding person. Below the cover image, the page name "FB vs. Breastfeeding Alliance" is displayed in blue, with "Community" underneath. Navigation buttons for "Like", "Follow", "Message", and a menu icon are visible. Below the cover image, there are tabs for "Timeline", "About", "Photos", "Likes", and "More". The page shows "10k people like this" and an "Invite friends to like this Page" button. A post creation area is visible with a "Write something..." text box and a "Post" button. At the bottom, a snippet of text from a post is visible: "challenge because bucket full of... their head. Each one who takes up the challenge has to nominate".

Limitations

Most expression is completely harmless and protected under the right to freedom of expression from interference by the state.

However, 'seeking, receiving and imparting information or ideas' includes expression which few societies could tolerate, such as incitement to murder or the sale of pornography to children. As a result, freedom of expression is not absolute and can be limited when it conflicts with other rights.

International law declares freedom of expression to be the rule. Limitations are the exception, permitted only to protect:

- the rights or reputations of others
- national security
- public order
- public health
- morals.

Limitation is legitimate if it falls within the very narrow conditions defined in the three-part test in Article 19(3) of the ICCPR:

challenge by nominating a bucket full of innocents over their head. Each one who takes up the challenge has to nominate
